

Two hypothetical mechanisms for fl-PA diffusion on a heterogeneous FS substrate consisting of isolated hydroxyl patches distributed randomly on the surface: (a) a molecule jumping between hydroxyl patches with the breaking of two hydrogen bonds (high activation energy) and (b) a molecule sliding within a hydroxyl patch without complete detachment but rather involving a concerted hydrogen bond exchange mechanism between neighboring hydroxyl sites (low activation energy).